LOYOLA UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
ROME CENTER YEARBOOK
1987 - 1988

LOYOLA UNIVERSITY
ROME CENTER
1987 - 1988

"Such a long time to be gone...
...such a short time to be there."

Dear Friends,

The time has come! It is in the spirit of arrivederci, until we meet again, that I write you these lines for your book of memories — memories of a unique year not only of your education but of your life. For you may not have such an experience again. You will remember the pleasant times and the challenges of this year. Both are many and varied. Put together they make you what you are now — different, really, from August 30, 1987 or January 10, 1988. «Experience is educational,» wrote the ancient Greek comedian Aristophanes. So as you look over these pages, do not think of them as just pictures and nice sayings, but as realities. Make your LURC experience come to life again and again!

During my first experience ever in administration, I was happy to share with you those joys and challenges. My objective for you — as also for myself — was to keep the Rome Center's standards where you wanted them and both your parents and your home schools expected them to be. You, with the faculty and staff, have maintained high academic goals for the Center in the classroom and your «intelligent travel.» If «thanks» is more of an action word than a noun, with your prayers and good wishes we will keep up those aims - to thank you for your genuine friendliness wherever we met. Hopefully, we'll meet again here in timeless Rome.

Therefore, those are the memories I, with the faculty and staff, would sincerely want you to live out as all of us continue to «grow in age and wisdom and grace» for the Lord's greater honor and glory. God bless you!

TROVA ROMA

If you are sensitive to the colors of a Renaissance palace, or the flower market, or the narrow cobblestone streets of a small medieval town; if the Mediterranean sky and long stretches of sandy beach fascinate you; if architecture and historic places matter to you, then Italy, il Bel Paese is the right place for you to spend some time.

There is no comparison with anything else. Stand in Piazza Navona in Rome and you seem to stand in front of a magnificent painting: baroque fountains and ancient structures are all around.

In every age, artists and poets have succumbed to the beauty of Rome, and have come to live in this city, drawing from ancient columns and colorful mosaics the inspiration for their works.

Indeed, Italy seems to be provided with more art than other European countries as well as an intricate history. The political, artistic, and religious development of Rome and Italy is a significant part of the history of our civilization.

Italian cuisine is also a developed art. Gastronomic creations are as great as the green hills that produce Italy's wine and fruit. The variety of the land and the people nurtures a large selection of regional dishes.

Some Americans who come in Italy still keep their fast pace; others discover dolce far niente, the sweet do nothing, and fall in love with the comfortable Italian way of life.

No matter where you are from, New York or San Francisco, after you spend a little time of your life in Italy, the experience will always have a special place in your heart.

ROMAN CAT

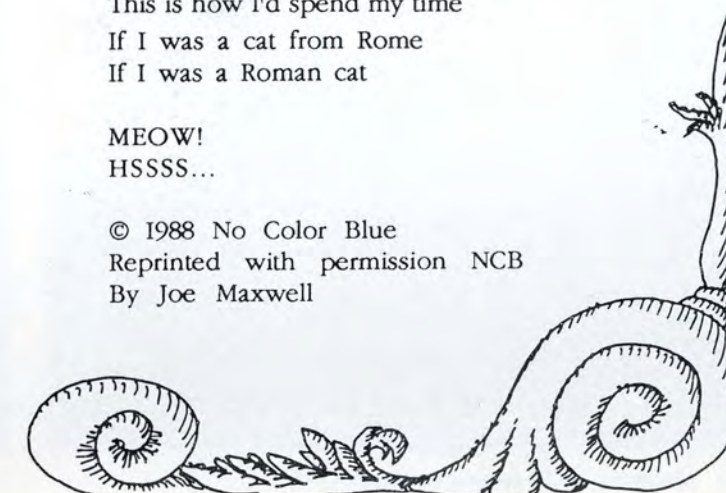

If I was a cat
I'd be a Roman cat
I would strut the streets
And always know where I was at
The cobblestone
Would be my home
If I had a choice
I'd be a cat from Rome

Chasin dogs
On my daily walk
Would be one thing
Of which I'd talk
Otherwise
I'd sit on cars
Get some sun
And lick my paws

And weekends I'd take the catacombs
Stop for a bone inside a tomb
Meet the boys and drink some time
This is how I'd spend my time
If I was a cat from Rome
If I was a Roman cat

UB GAINING

Saw you walkin down the hall today
Had to run into the room cuz you were in the way
And when I looked up - all I saw was your big ole pasta butt!
(And that ain't nothin compared to your gelati gut)
When I looked down to your thighs
Me-oh-my what a big surprise!

(chorus) U B Gaining!

And at lunch it wasn't a shock
To see you ears-high-deep in a pile of moonrocks.
And whenever you're drinking, it's such a joke
Ain't you ever heard of diet coke?

(chorus) U B Gaining!

After dinner you say you're starved
So it's down to Rinaldo's to scarf them Raider bars.
Do you think you could last just one day
Without gorging on them sweet dolce?

(chorus) U B Gaining!

When out on the town
No trip is complete
Til the all-night bakery
Hears the thundering of your feet.

(chorus) U B Gaining!

When you go back to the States
Your friends will be amazed at the size of your waist.
When your parents ask you "What you gonna do?"
You're gonna scream "MICKEY D's and BURGER KING TOO!!"

About 160 students attended the big party in the two-level restaurant entirely reserved for the occasion...

The menu consisted of two types of pasta, steak, salad, fries, and fruit for dessert - a very filling Italian meal!

In the beginning of the evening students seemed to be a little reserved...

However, as the evening progressed, there were no longer separate individuals.

The purpose of the event was to acquaint the students with each other and with LURC faculty.

It's the end of the world as we know it...

MEMORIES

•No, it's not Massimo, it's Via Massimi. •Let's take the long tour of the campus. •Who is this man telling us we are about the enter the Twilight Zone?. •Are there really only 40 guys here?.

Those beginning days seem like years ago. We entered Loyola University Rome Center excited, but scared. It was like being a freshman all over again. We encountered new people, new roommates, and a very different environment.

A bond quickly formed among the students. This bond was referred to by some students as the "buddy system." It began our first night in Rome while walking home from Birreria Pizzeria. We all joined hands forming a long chain. Nobody knew exactly whose hand they were holding, but we felt comforted knowing we were not alone.

The bond grew stronger as the days passed. Students planned trips together, seeking advice from resident assistants, faculty and of course, Let's Go Europe. The world was ours; we had our Eurail passes, backpacks and friends. Twelve-hour train rides were actually fun because they provided time to gossip, write letters, and indulge in food and drink. Our passport pages became colored with the stamps of all the countries we visited. We did not travel glamorously, riding in second-class trains and staying in youth hostels, but we were content.

Back at school we tried to concentrate on our studies. Students gathered in Rinaldo's for last-minute cramming and long rap sessions. We all swore that we made Rinaldo a millionaire with our many purchases of cappuccinos, diet Cokes, and hamburgers.

After studying, many students dressed up in the latest Italian fashions and headed for their favorite bars and discos, such as Giovanni's, Fiddler's Elbow, and Acropolis. We always made sure we were near Piazza Cavour at 1:30 a.m. when the doors of the all-night bakery opened. Hungry students devoured bombas and other dolci while walking back to Loyola, more than many will admit.

We became well oriented to the Italian culture and learned many valuable lessons. First, we learned the little things, like always remembering to carry a bus ticket with you in case an inspector is on the bus, and locking or securing your door when traveling overnight on trains. Then, we learned to accept and understand more about Italian culture. And, we found that the more work you get done during the week, the more carefree the weekend will be. Finally, we learned that whenever you get homesick, you are surrounded by people who care and understand.

We all grew stronger as individuals and grew closer as a group. We gave a little of ourselves and gained a lot from others. With a book full of names and addresses we left the Rome Center with plans for reunion and promises to write. The bond we shared as we held hands on the first night was strengthened as we lived, learned, and laughed together during our time at the Rome Center.

ON THE ROAD TO NOWHERE

Nightmare on Trionfale Street

Federico's Revenge

Federico waits, silently biding his time. «So these Loyola students think they can ride this deluxe, ATAC bus free of charge.» Federico shifts gears grinning madly to himself as the bus winds down Trionfale.

Three unsuspecting Loyola students sit, Heinekens in hand, as the bus speeds to its final destination. AND THEN FEDERICO STRIKES... 70 km/h, 80 km/h, 100 km/h.

«No-STOP!» Come the cries of the Loyola students. The bus rips around the twists, empty except for three screaming souls... and Freddy. Their bodies get tossed from side to side. Federico cackles menacingly and then there is a deathly silence as the bus rolls to a stop. Our poor friends struggle to their feet. As they come to an erect position they see three hairy men at each doorway. «Biglietti!»

«But we're tourists.» «We thought you could pay on the bus.» «We didn't know you needed tickets.» All of the excuses fail as the ticket collector holds up his hand and points to the sign written in English.

Tom groans and rubs his eyes as he wakes up, «It was all a bad dream; it was all just a dream.» Relief fills his face. Then he realizes that he is not in his bed or in his room, nor are his friends in their beds. They are all awake, but not at LURC; they're in an ATAC prison in their own self-made ATAC hell.

Federico smiles through the bars and laughs. «Biglietti...»

I've filled many dreams with my European travels and seen places only pictured in books. I've created a home at Loyola in Rome and found that I find so precious and dear the friends that I've made from far and from near. We've all grown together and built a strong bond. Each experience shared being special and fond.

These months I have beautifully spent in the hands of a country so exquisite and kempt, have opened my mind, my heart, and my soul and taught me that life is in my control. And aside from the knowledge of history attained, there's still more I've been so lucky to gain. Rome has given me a gift more precious than gold.

The memories I'll cherish will never grow old. And with every tear that I'll shed when I leave, I'll have something inside we all share and believe. So thank you, dear Rome, for filling our lives with just a little special pride.
